

Abstract

There is disclosed a process for melting a luminescent oxygen sensitive compound into extruded polymer films. Specifically, there is disclosed a process for thermal melting of oxygen-sensitive indicators into common packaging polymers used for commercial packaging of products, such as foods. The oxygen-sensitive indicators can be used for real-time monitoring of oxygen in commercial packaging operations.

TOP SECRET